It is a direct descendant of the Phoenician alphabet and is the earliest form of the Hebrew alphabet. The Paleo-Hebrew alphabet is a 22-letter abjad, consisting of 10 consonants and 12 vowels. The letters are arranged in a 2x11 grid, with the first row containing the 10 consonants and the second row containing the 12 vowels. The letters are written from right to left, and the vowels are written as small marks above or below the consonants.
